Last year's hit event is back – with a sequel, a world premiere and a nod to the Bard.

Three actors. Three scripts. Three shows in repertory. Last year, our series of one-actor plays was such a hit we're bringing the concept back with three new shows. In one, Milicent Wright performs in Neat, a sequel to last year's Pretty Fire. In another, a father ponders the changes he undergoes during his wife's pregnancy while gaining understanding about what it means to be a father for the first time. And in the third, a Shakespearean actor takes a humorous look at his life with the Bard. Three powerful plays. Three intimate performances. One special IRT event.
